Four reasons to consider alternative transportation

1

You'll save money.

A commuter who drives 20 miles, round trip each day spends more than $2,000 a year. By using alternative transportation, you use less gas and spend less to maintain your car.

2

It's good for you.

People who carpool or take transit report lower stress levels and increased productivity at work. Those who carpool or take the bus tend to be on time more often.

3

It's flexible and easy.

You don't have to carpool every day – simply choose days that work best for you. Riding with someone else is more convenient than you may think. Most carpool or vanpool arrangements are door-to-door, which means you don't have to search for parking or worry about parking fees.

4

It helps improve air quality.

Carpooling, riding the bus and combining errands results in improved air quality and less congestion. In fact, simply carpooling with one other person three days a week can cut your ozone-producing emissions by up to 30 percent. Check out AirQKC.org to learn about the importance of air quality.
